Rapid advances in the electronics industry have dramatically increased the power consumption per unit area. Recent trends in shrinking transistor size for stacked ICs cause the amount of Joules produced to become more than the heat produced in the device.